The Procession-The Fireworks, and the Mass Meeting.

The preparations for the great National Celebration of Union Victories, which were commenced on the 22d of February, have reached their climax, and

It depends upon the weather whether they will even spate successfully or not, as the committee of citizens who have control of the affair have done all that could done in so short a time to make it one of the most imposing and splendid demonstrations that has ever faken place in this city.

The work of combining a military and civic display; a mass meeting, and a pyrotechnic display all in one. has called out all the energies of the gentlemen on the

CHRONIC CATARRES

SYMPTOMS, CAUSES AND EFFECTS.

A FEW PRACTICAL REMARKS BY

nating in consumption.

A feeling of irritation, sensitiveness, heat or pain is exper-noes a frequent desire to sneeze, and is accompanied with a dis As the disease progresses, this secretion becomes prurulent producing irritation there, and requiring frequent expectors the threat is very much facilitated by a herizontal position of the body; sleep is frequently disturbed by a sensation of chok ng in consequence, and many are obliged to lie in a semi-re umbent position to obtain the necessary sleep.

Owing to the heat in the head the watery portion of the discharge often evaporates, and assuming a condition of solidiof the threat, in the shape of crusts or hardened lumps. The emove them, either by forcibly blowing the nose, or by per istent hawking-a practice as disagreeable to the one affected commulate more rapidly, and the feeling is therefore most un omfortable in the morning. Sometimes all efforts to clear the the nose takes place frequently, sometimes attacking the bones when small particles of that substance will occasionally be

The accumulation of the discharge, together with the thick ordant, harsh and masal character; the sense of smell become nuch impaired or entirely lost, and the same effect, though less frequent, is produced on taste. Occasionally, while blowaddenly with something like a snapping sound. This phenomena may be repeated several times, until hearing does not return, but remains permanently injured. In other cases hearing is lost so gradually that a considerable degree of deafness may exist before the person is really aware of the fact. Either condition is often accompanied with noises in the head of every conceivable description, materially increasing the distress of water on exposure to cold and wind, or after the slightest exertion. A pain, more or less acute, or a distressing feeling of pressure, is experienced over the eyes, and sometimes on the op or back of the head, and also pain in the face, closely resembling neuralgia, for which it is very often mistaken. The that disease. distress in the head weakens the memory, and produces irritability and more seness of disposition. The stomach generally suffers more or less, is weak and irritable; the appetite is capricions, and is nearly always had in the morning. In severe CATARRH OF TWENTY YEARS' cases the system becomes feeble and prestrated.

This is manifested by a disposition to drowsiness and sleep n aversion to either physical or mental exertion, and a feeling friene and weakness.

Not unfrequently catarrh proves fatal, either by debilitating the system and wearing out the patient, or by traveling downward, and producing throat affections, broughitis, and finally consumption. It may be safely asserted that, after hereditary predisposition, catarrh is the most frequent and important cause of this fatal complaint.

The symptoms of catarrh vary considerably in different individuals, and the degree of their severity depends upon constitutional idiosyncrasies and various external influences. With ome the complaint continues for a number of years in a mild orm, and without causing any of the injurious results above described, while with others all the worst effects are produced n a short space of time, and cases, apparently most harmless, may, through imprudent exposure, additional cold, or unfavor able changes of the weather, suddenly exhibit all the violence and malignity which characterize the severest ones.

CAUSES OF CATARRH. Any inflammation of the mucous membrane of the throat or nose is favorable to the production of Catarrh. Ordinary olds, if neglected or aggravated by additional exposure, are very apt to become chronic and run into Catarrh, and are the cause in nearly two-thirds of all the cases that present themselves. Scarlet fever, measles, diphtheria, and all the diseases affecting the throat, the inhalation of dust, impure atmosphere or wrid vapors, are among its most frequent faciling causes Catarrh attacks in preference those possessing a feeble scrofulous constitution and a lymphatic temperament; indiriduals of soft fibres, respiring an impure or confined atmos phere, or whose systems are debilitated by insufficient or un substantial nourishment; persons enervated by severe mental labor, physical excesses, or exhaustive diseases; those who lead a life of indolence, or dwell, either from choice or necessity, in damp, ill ventilated places, deprived of pure air and the necessary sunshine. Persons who are exposed to the ricissitudes of the weather, or insufficiently protected against old, acrofulous children, chierotic females, and those recently mined. In fact, whatever debilitates the system or vitlates the constitution, favors the development of Catarrh. Its great AGES, from 9 a. m. till 3 p. m., at his residence, prevalence in this country is swing to the sudden and frequent changes of the weather and temperature, to the exten, sive travel by rall where persons are confined in dusty, badly. ventilated, over-crowded, and over-heated cars. TREATMENT OF CATARESI. Catarrh has been considered an incurable disease, and on the strength of that supposition, has been neglected by beth it profession and the public.

The author has for years past made this complaint his special study; was the first to publish a minute description of its us ture, symptoms and effects, and has, by doing so, directed the attention of both the profession and the public to the wast im portance of the subject.

By the established success of the treatment as lastifuted and perfected by him, he has proved beyond dispute the carability of catarrh, if properly treated. All doubts of the correctness of this statement will be dispelled by the perusal of the annexed testimonials from parties occupying well-known post-
